

Question: How to get extended color bands to adjust with mobile responsiveness changes in screen real estate

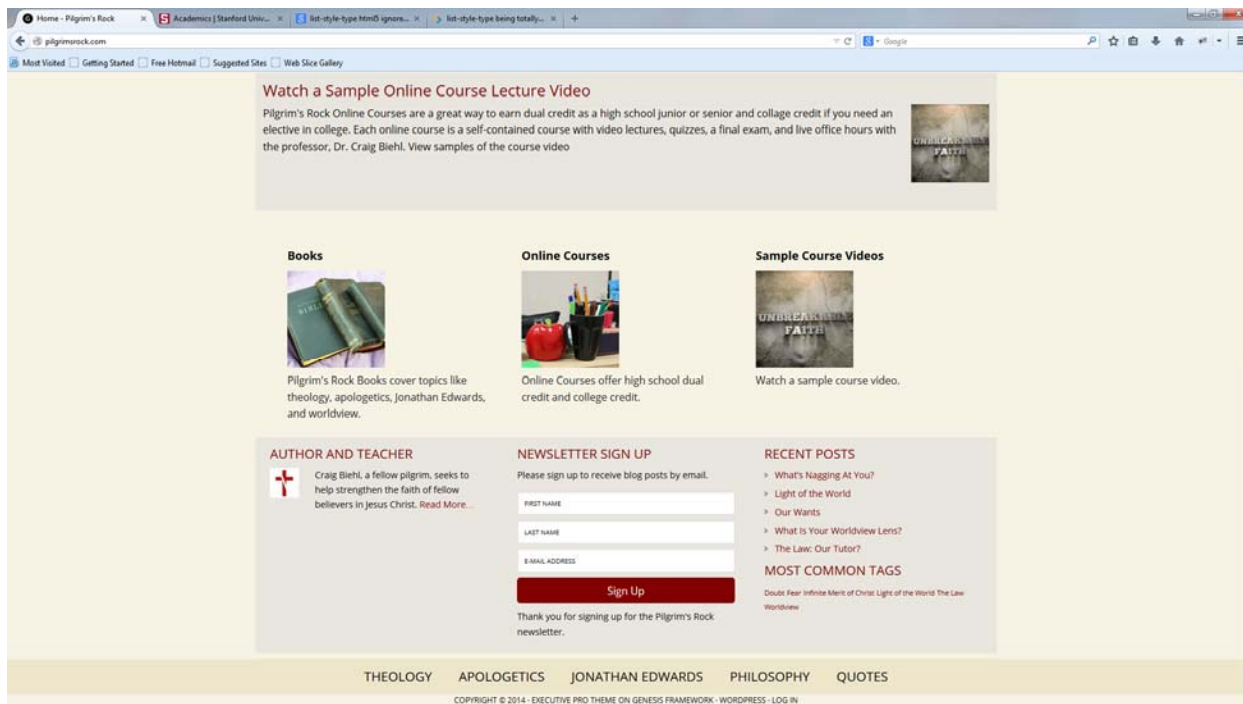

Correct appearance on the widest screens

22" Wide screen – browser IE 10

Header & Primary Menu – color bars continued – aligned correctly

Secondary Menu – footer – color bar continued – aligned correctly

Style.css code: - using Pseudo elements on 'html' and 'body'

/* Add background color sections to the far left/right of main content area of web site to allow color to extend all the way out to the sides of a wide screen for header, primary menu and secondary menu footer AB 9-11-14 */

html::before {
    content: "";
    display: block;
    position: absolute;
    top: 0;
    min-width: 100%;
    z-index: -1;
    height: 10.5%; /* 100px change me */
    background: #820000; /* change me */
}
```

/* this extends the custom red color across the whole header area AB 9-11-14 */

body::before {
    content: "";
    display: block;
    position: absolute;
    top: 100px;
    min-width: 100%;
    z-index: -1;
    height: 5.5%; /* 54px change me */
    background: #eee6cb; /* change me */
}
```

/* this extends the menu color across the whole primary menu area AB 9-11-14 */

html::after {
    content: "";
```

```
display: block;
position: relative;
min-width: 100%;
z-index: -1;
height: 54px; /* change me */
margin-top: -80px; /* change me */
background: #eee6cb; /* change me */
```

```
}
```

```
/* this extends the menu color across the whole footer secondary menu area AB 9-11-14 */

Incorrect appearance of color bars as the viewable screen shrinks

Header and primary navigation menu areas – aligned incorrectly – not responding to code to change the height/width

Secondary Menu – footer – color bar continued – aligned incorrectly – not responding to code to change the height/width
